

Biosheet
November 2016

Sue Kim received her B.S. in nursing at Ewha Womans University, Seoul, Korea, followed by her M.S. at Columbia University, New York, where she was trained as a women's health nurse practitioner. She obtained her doctorate (PhD) at the University of California, Los Angeles (UCLA), and received post-doctoral training in the area of community-based participatory research.

Dr. Kim's clinical experience includes staff nurse at Severance Hospital in Korea, as well as working as nurse practitioner in community-based cancer screening and educational outreach programs.

Starting with teaching experience as Assistant Professor at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, USA, Dr. Kim is currently Professor at Yonsei University, College of Nursing, Seoul, Korea.

Her area of research includes maternal and women's health issues, cancer survivorship, and self-care and family adjustment in women's cancers.

She is an active member of national and international professional organizations, including the Oncology Nursing Society, Sigma Theta Tau International Honor Society of Nursing, Korean Council of Science Editors, Korea Cancer Survivorship Study Group, etc.

As professional service, Dr. Kim reviews manuscripts and grant proposals and serves as editorial board member on several journals (Issues in Mental Health Nursing, Journal of Educational Evaluation for Health Professions).

ORCID:           <http://orcid.org/0000-0003-3785-2445>